LIMINAL SPACE

First Contact

Your Gateway to Out-of-Body Experience

Science-backed techniques from 50 years of consciousness research

WELCOME

Welcome to Liminal Space

What if you could leave your physical body, fully conscious, and explore reality from the outside? What if you could perceive events happening in distant locations without being there? What if the human mind had capabilities so extraordinary that governments spent decades and millions of dollars studying them in classified programs?

This is not science fiction. The CIA studied it. The U.S. military built programs around it. The Monroe Institute has been training people to do it since 1971. Peer-reviewed neuroscience journals have published papers on the mechanisms behind it. And now, you are holding the keys.

This guide contains three precision-engineered binaural beat audio tracks and a step-by-step protocol based on the same techniques used in the CIA's Gateway Program. Out-of-body experiences. Remote viewing. Astral travel. Expanded consciousness. These are not beliefs. They are skills. And like any skill, they can be learned.

What you are about to learn is just the tip of the iceberg. The Focus levels in this guide are the first three stops on a map that extends far beyond what most people believe is possible. But everyone starts here.

What You Will Find Inside

- The science behind binaural beats and why governments took them seriously
- What remote viewing and astral travel actually are, and how they work
- Focus levels 10, 12, and 15: the foundational states of consciousness
- A step-by-step protocol for your first out-of-body session
- A seven-day practice schedule to build your foundation

Approach this with curiosity, not expectation. The most profound experiences tend to arrive when you stop trying to force them.

THE SCIENCE

How Binaural Beats Work

When you listen to two slightly different frequencies through headphones, one in each ear, your brain perceives a third frequency: the mathematical difference between the two. This is called a binaural beat. For example, if your left ear receives 200 Hz and your right ear receives 210 Hz, your brain generates an internal 10 Hz pulse.

This phenomenon, known as the frequency following response, causes your neural oscillations to synchronize with the perceived beat frequency. In simple terms: you can use sound to guide your brain into specific states of consciousness.

Brainwave States

Beta (13-30 Hz)
Normal waking consciousness. Alert, focused, analytical thinking.

Alpha (8-13 Hz)
Relaxed awareness. The state between waking and sleeping. Light meditation.

Theta (4-8 Hz)
Deep meditation, hypnagogic imagery, vivid internal experiences. The gateway to non-ordinary states.

Delta (0.5-4 Hz)
Deep dreamless sleep. In trained practitioners, conscious access to delta produces the most profound altered states.

The audio tracks included with this guide are calibrated to produce beats at 10 Hz (alpha), 7 Hz (theta), and 4 Hz (deep theta/delta). Each frequency corresponds to a specific Focus level in the Monroe Institute framework.

THE SCIENCE

The Research Behind This

The Monroe Institute (1971-Present)

Robert Monroe founded the Monroe Institute after years of personal research into out-of-body experiences. The Institute developed Hemi-Sync, a patented audio technology that uses binaural beats to synchronize left and right brain hemispheres. Over five decades, thousands of participants have reported reproducible altered states using their protocols.

The CIA Gateway Analysis (1983)

In 1983, U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel Wayne McDonnell authored a classified analysis of the Gateway Process for the CIA. The report did not dismiss it. It concluded that the Monroe Institute's techniques could produce genuine altered states of consciousness and that the implications were significant enough to warrant serious study. The document describes how binaural beats synchronize brain hemispheres, how consciousness can operate beyond the physical body, and how reality itself may be far stranger than mainstream science acknowledges. It was declassified in 2003. You can read it yourself on the CIA's public reading room.

Project Stargate: Remote Viewing

The CIA and Defense Intelligence Agency ran a classified program called Project Stargate for over twenty years. The program trained military personnel to perceive distant locations, objects, and events using only their minds, a technique called remote viewing. The results were significant enough that the program received continuous government funding from 1972 to 1995. When it was finally declassified, the statistical evidence was called significant by independent reviewers. Remote viewing is not mysticism. It is a trained skill, and the techniques in this guide lay the groundwork for developing it.

Tom Campbell: A Physicist's Model

Tom Campbell is a physicist who worked with Robert Monroe in the early days of the Institute. His theory, My Big TOE (Theory of Everything), provides a rigorous scientific framework where consciousness is not a byproduct of the brain but the fundamental nature of reality itself. In Campbell's model, out-of-body experiences are not hallucinations. They are your consciousness accessing a larger information system that exists beyond physical spacetime. This is not philosophy. It is a testable, falsifiable model built by a working physicist.

BEYOND THE BODY

What Becomes Possible

Once you learn to shift your consciousness beyond the physical body, an entirely new landscape of human capability opens up. These are not theoretical. Each of these has been documented, studied, and in some cases, operationally deployed by military and intelligence agencies.

DOCUMENTED SINCE ANCIENT EGYPT

Astral Travel / Out-of-Body Experience

Your conscious awareness separates from the physical body and operates independently. You can perceive your own body from above. You can move through walls. You can travel to locations both familiar and unknown. Robert Monroe documented thousands of these experiences with scientific rigor. This is the core skill that everything else builds upon, and it is exactly what the Focus levels in this guide prepare you for.

USED BY CIA / DIA FOR 23 YEARS

Remote Viewing

The ability to perceive people, places, and events at a distance using only the mind. The U.S. government's Project Stargate trained operatives to describe targets anywhere on Earth, sometimes with startling accuracy. Ingo Swann, one of the original remote viewers, described the rings of Jupiter before NASA's Pioneer 10 confirmed them. Remote viewing is a learnable protocol. The expanded awareness states in this guide are the starting point.

THE LIMINAL SPACE

Where You Become Limitless

The liminal space is the threshold between ordinary and extraordinary consciousness. It is where the rules change. Physical distance becomes irrelevant. Time becomes flexible. The boundaries of self expand until there are no boundaries at all. Every great explorer of consciousness, from Monroe to Campbell to the Stargate viewers, passed through this same threshold. You are standing at it now.

THE FOCUS LEVELS

Mapping Consciousness

The Monroe Institute uses a numbered system called Focus levels to describe different states of consciousness. Think of them as coordinates on a map. The three tracks included in this guide target the foundational levels.

TRACK 1 • 10 HZ ALPHA

Focus 10: Mind Awake, Body Asleep

The foundational state. Your physical body enters complete relaxation while your mind remains alert and aware. Most people experience this as a floating sensation, a heaviness in the limbs, or a distinct shift in body awareness. You may notice hypnagogic imagery: flashes of color, geometric patterns, or brief dream-like scenes.

TRACK 2 • 7 HZ THETA

Focus 12: Expanded Awareness

A deeper state where your awareness expands beyond the physical body. The sense of having a body may diminish. Perceptions become more vivid, internal. People often report a sense of being larger than their physical form, heightened intuition, and the beginning of non-local perception.

THE FOCUS LEVELS

The Deeper States

TRACK 3 • 4 HZ THETA/DELTA

Focus 15: The No-Time State

The most advanced state in this guide. Focus 15 is described as existing outside of time. The normal sense of past, present, and future dissolves. Practitioners report a vast, empty awareness, a void that is simultaneously full of potential. This is the state from which the most profound experiences emerge: vivid non-physical environments, encounters with other forms of consciousness, and full out-of-body experiences.

Your Progression Path

These three Focus levels form a natural progression. Master Focus 10 first. It is the foundation upon which everything else is built. Once you can reliably reach the mind-awake-body-asleep state, Focus 12 becomes accessible naturally. Focus 15 represents the edge of what most practitioners experience in their first months of practice.

There is no rush. The Monroe Institute's full program includes Focus levels up to 27 and beyond. The three levels in this guide give you a solid launchpad.

Focus 10
Foundation

Focus 12
Expansion

Focus 15
Transcendence

YOUR FIRST SESSION

Step-by-Step Protocol

1. Prepare Your Environment

- Choose a quiet, dark room where you will not be disturbed for 30 minutes
- Set your phone to airplane mode or do not disturb
- Use stereo headphones (not speakers). The binaural effect requires separate signals to each ear
- Lie down on your back in a comfortable position. A bed or yoga mat works well
- Use a light blanket. Your body temperature will drop as you relax
- Remove glasses, watches, or anything that creates physical distraction

2. The Preparation Ritual

Before pressing play, spend two minutes on this preparation sequence. These steps come directly from the Monroe Institute's Gateway program.

Energy Conversion Box

Visualize a sturdy box with a lid. Place all of your worries, concerns, and mental chatter inside this box. Close the lid. You can retrieve them later. This simple act of symbolic containment gives your subconscious permission to let go.

Resonant Tuning

Take three deep breaths. On each exhale, hum or vocalize a long, low tone. Feel the vibration in your chest and head. This activates the vagus nerve and shifts your nervous system from sympathetic (fight-or-flight) to parasympathetic (rest-and-digest).

Affirmation

State silently: "I am more than my physical body. I deeply desire to expand my awareness beyond the limitations of my physical senses." The Monroe Institute uses this affirmation to set intention. Use your own words if you prefer.

YOUR FIRST SESSION

During and After

3. During the Session

Press play on the Focus 10 track. Close your eyes. Allow the audio to guide your brainwaves. Your only job is passive observation.

- Do not try to force anything. The harder you try, the more your analytical mind activates, which is the opposite of what you want
- If thoughts arise, notice them and let them pass. Return your attention to the sound
- Pay attention to any physical sensations: tingling, heaviness, warmth, vibration
- If you see colors, patterns, or images behind your closed eyes, observe them without grasping
- You may feel a shift, a moment where your body seems to drop away. This is Focus 10. Stay calm

4. Common First-Session Experiences

Deep relaxation
Nearly everyone experiences profound physical relaxation. This alone is valuable.

Hypnagogic imagery
Flashes of light, geometric patterns, brief dreamlike scenes. Your brain is entering theta.

Vibrational sensations
A buzzing or humming feeling throughout the body. This is significant. It often precedes deeper states.

Floating or sinking
A sense that your body is lighter or heavier than normal, or that you are gently rocking.

Time distortion
Twenty minutes may feel like five, or like an hour. This is a sign of altered state access.

Sleep
Falling asleep is common and completely fine. Your brain is learning a new skill. It gets better with practice.

5. After the Session

Open your eyes slowly. Take a moment before moving. Write down anything you experienced, no matter how small. These notes become invaluable as patterns emerge over multiple sessions.

YOUR FIRST SESSION

Session Journal Prompts

After each session, spend five minutes with these prompts. Your journal is the most important tool for tracking progress and recognizing patterns.

1. What physical sensations did I notice? (heaviness, tingling, warmth, vibration)
2. Did I see any imagery? Describe colors, shapes, scenes, however fleeting.
3. Did I notice any shift in body awareness? A moment where the body felt distant?
4. How did time feel? Faster? Slower? Did I lose track?
5. Did I fall asleep? If so, at approximately what point?
6. What was my emotional state during the session? Calm? Restless? Anxious? Peaceful?
7. Did anything surprise me?
8. On a scale of 1-10, how deep did the relaxation feel?

TROUBLESHOOTING

Common Questions

I keep falling asleep. Is that normal?

Completely normal, especially in the first week. Your brain is accustomed to interpreting deep relaxation as a cue to sleep. Two techniques help: try sitting at a slight incline instead of lying flat, and practice at a time when you are alert, not tired. Morning sessions work well for many people.

I did not feel anything significant.

Adjust your expectations. The first few sessions are about training your brain to respond to the frequencies. Most people notice at least deep relaxation. Subtle shifts, a slight change in body awareness, a flicker of color, these are meaningful. Note them. Consistency matters more than intensity.

I felt vibrations and it startled me.

This is excellent. The vibrational state is a well-documented phenomenon that often precedes deeper experiences. It feels like a strong buzzing or electrical humming throughout your body. Next time, try to remain calm and observe. Let the vibrations intensify without resistance. You are on the right path.

How long until I have a full out-of-body experience?

This varies widely. Some people report experiences within the first few sessions. For most, it takes consistent practice over two to eight weeks. Focus on mastering Focus 10 first. The mind-awake-body-asleep state is the foundation. Everything else follows from there.

Is this safe? Can anything go wrong?

In over fifty years of documented research at the Monroe Institute, there are no reports of harm from binaural beat meditation. The worst case is that you fall asleep or feel nothing. You are always in control. Any sudden intention to return to normal awareness brings you back immediately. Think of it as a lucid dream you can exit at will.

7-DAY PROTOCOL

Your First Week

Follow this schedule for your first seven days. Each session is twenty minutes. Practice at the same time each day if possible. Consistency trains your brain to enter these states more quickly.

Day 1 Focus 10

Introduction. Follow the full preparation ritual. Observe what happens. Journal after.

Day 2 Focus 10

Repeat. You may notice you relax faster. Pay attention to any new sensations.

Day 3 Focus 10

Deepening. Try to notice the exact moment your body falls asleep while your mind stays awake.

Day 4 Focus 10

Consolidation. By now you should be reaching relaxation faster. Note any imagery.

Day 5 Focus 12

Expansion. Move to the Focus 12 track. The deeper frequency may feel unfamiliar. That is expected.

Day 6 Focus 12

Exploration. Your second session at this level. Allow your awareness to expand. Do not direct it.

Day 7 Focus 15

The deep end. Use the Focus 15 track. This is theta/delta territory. Let go completely.

After completing this protocol, you will have a solid foundation in all three Focus levels. Most people find that their experiences deepen significantly between days 4 and 7. Continue practicing with whichever track resonates most.

WHAT COMES NEXT

This Was First Contact

You have taken the first step into a world that most people do not know exists. The vibrational sensations, the imagery, the shift in body awareness: these are not placebo effects. They are your consciousness beginning to recognize that it is not confined to your skull.

Focus 10 through 15 is the launchpad. The Monroe Institute's full map extends through Focus 21, the bridge to other realities, Focus 27, a state described as a reception center for non-physical consciousness, and beyond. Remote viewing. Astral navigation. Communication with non-physical intelligence. Perception across time. These are not fantasies. They are documented capabilities that become available as you master progressively deeper states.

The liminal space is where ordinary limits dissolve. Where physical distance, linear time, and the boundaries of the self become negotiable. Every advanced practitioner started exactly where you are now, with a pair of headphones and the willingness to discover what they are truly capable of.

The Full Exploration

- Complete binaural beat library: all Focus levels through 21 and beyond
- Remote viewing protocols: trained perception at a distance
- Advanced OBE techniques: phasing, energy body activation, astral navigation
- A community of explorers mapping consciousness together
- Guided sessions with voice narration for the deepest immersions

This Was First Contact.

What you have experienced is just the threshold.
The full exploration is available at liminalspace.co

Step through.

LiminalSpace

liminalspace.co

Copyright 2026 Liminal Space. All rights reserved.
This guide is for personal use only. Do not redistribute.